SLANTS OF LIGHT: STORIES AND POEMS FROM THE WOMEN S WRITING CIRCLE

Createspace, United States, 2013. Paperback. Book Condition: New. 211 x 142 mm. Language: English . Brand New Book. This collection of stories and poems represents a unique and collective writing journey from a diverse group of women writers. The settings of their verses and narratives vary. From a moment's realization on the Ocean City, NJ boardwalk when a woman admits her marriage is over - to a Sunday afternoon's meditation on life's choices and missed opportunities - to the beauty in a passing snowflake - to a humorous instance of Internet dating while searching for one last chance at romance - this anthology will inspire, delight and amuse. KIRKUS REVIEW A collective of women writers lets its figurative hair down in these recollections, assertions of independence and examinations of family dynamics. Members of the Philadelphia-based Women's Writing Circle compile their stories, memories and poems in this tenderhearted, nostalgic anthology. Most of the pieces touch on the trials and joys of friendship, marriage and careers, and whether memoir or fiction, the stories all share an investment in exploring the authors most meaningful, significant relationships and articulating experiences they never before dared. Much of the book is raked with sentimentalities and manifest observations. One story, which begins with a mother's words of warning to her 8-year-old daughter- A woman needs to pay attention to a man's words, but even closer to his tone -goes on to state the obvious: Something tells me there was a lesson in those words. Even though the writing tends to be baggy and imprecise, its passion and commitment are undeniable. While many stories have overlapping themes and stock characters, such as the inattentive husband and the loyal best friend, some develop into moving tales by capturing the uniqueness of the author...
