The thought should be that you need to be warned, have to be reminded. --officium, acc. of the thing after commoner, cf. Stich. 58; moneatur. officium: elsewhere in Pl. and Ter. only neut. pron., id, hoc, etc., after moneo. matum means generally in Pl. punishment, the slave s evil, and from this sense it passes over into curses, and finally into questions like quid, malum.? 242. 150-156. The numbers attached to these vss. indicate their order in the mss. Pall, and in Goetz; the palimpsest has 154, 153. The connection of thought from 143 appears to be this: Now if you do not listen to me and get rid of your laziness, it shall be the worse for you. I gave you your orders yesterday, but you are so careless that nothing but a thrashing will keep you up...
